

3 Leo's fortune

Narrator: Now, let me see. Leo, you're so lucky. When you're sixteen, you'll meet a really, really nice girl. You'll go to parties with her every weekend ... oh no, that's wrong ... let me see ... no, you and Olivia, that's her name, no, wait, it's Paula, not Olivia ... the two of you will work hard at school, and yes, you'll do a lot of sport. You'll run a race every month, and ... you'll go climbing in the mountains. You'll often go for walks in the park, so nice, so romantic. You are a football fan and at the weekend you'll both go and watch Tottenham play. After school, you'll find a good job. I think that you'll be a doctor. What else can I see? You'll live in a nice house, but not in London. I can't see this very well, but I think you'll live by the sea, not too far away from London. You'll marry and have five children, two girls and three boys. Your kids' favourite sports will be football and volleyball and you'll play with them in the park or on the beach every day. You'll have a big car and you'll take your family to wonderful places around Britain. You'll have lots of friends. One of your friends is an astronaut, and he'll take you and your family for a holiday on the moon. You'll be the first British family to travel to the moon. When you're older, you'll move to Nottingham and live in Sherwood Forest, with two dogs, four cats, twenty-two chickens and eight ducks.
