

Rob's first cake*Rob:

Hi Brendon. This is Rob. I really have a little problem here. I want to bake a cake for a charity bake-off at my school.

Brendon:

Ok. When is it? How much time do you have?

Rob:

It's tomorrow, and it starts at half past twelve.

Brendon:

Ok then, not much time. Why don't you try the internet and look for some recipes?

Rob:

I can't find a good recipe. It's all so difficult. I want something easy.

Brendon:

Ok, why don't you make some cookies, you know, biscuits. That's not so difficult.

Rob:

Yes, but I really want to make a cake, not biscuits.

Brendon:

I think I can help you. I can send you my aunt's recipe for banana cake. That's quite easy to make. So do you want it?

Rob:

I don't like bananas. They are horrible. But I want the recipe. Can you send it?

Brendon:

Here it comes.

Rob:

Thanks.

Brendon:

So what do you think of it.

Rob:

It looks really easy. Yes, I think I can do it. But I haven't got any bananas.

Brendon:

Go to the supermarket then and get some bananas.

Rob:

I can't. The shop near our house closes in a minute. But wait, my parents are out shopping. They can bring some bananas for me from the supermarket. That's open until half past nine. I phone them in a minute.

Brendon:

And then your mom can help you with the cake when she is back home.

Rob:

I don't know. She doesn't really like baking cakes, but my dad does. He always helps me in the kitchen. Well, it's time to walk the dog. But thanks for the recipe. Bye.

Brendon:

No problem, you're welcome.